A Supposedly Fun Thing That I'll Never Do Again by David Foster Wallace:

"This is a compilation of essays the most central of which focuses on a Cruise. The writer goes on a cruise in order to capture the fullness of being "spoiled" and the effects of pampering on the human psyche. The author has a talent for made-up words and the pages are dripping with sarcasm. I love it."

Every time I try to write

It is a tale of woe.

As time goes by my poetry

gets worse and worse I know.
